

Jerry C. Hahn

Insurance Consultant

Jerry C. Hahn graduated with a BBA degree from Western Michigan University in 1966. He accepted a position with Dow Corning and eventually was transferred to the Carrolton, Kentucky Plant. While in Carrolton he got his Masters Degree in Finance from Xavier University in Cincinnati.

Jerry was transferred back to corporate head quarters in Michigan where he later accepted the position of Plant Accountant/Materials Manager at the Greensboro, North Carolina Plant. After 4 years he was transferred back to the home office where he accepted the position of CFO at the Memphis, Tennessee Plant where Dow Corning had purchased a Medical Device Manufacturer.

After 12 years with Dow Corning in Tennessee, he was offered another position at the Michigan Home office, but instead decided to accept a position with Magline Incorporated instead of moving back to Michigan. After three years he was offered a position as CFO with the Coffee Beanery Limited, a coffee franchiser.

After several years, he found a position with Direct Sourcing Solutions based in Louisville where he stayed until the economy forced the business to down-size, when he went to work as CFO for Shippers Supply Company and IDEA LLC.

In 2009 Jerry decided it was time to retire but quickly became bored. He became interested in the finance industry and decided to become certified as a life Insurance agent consultant and joined the Feddern Financial Consulting Group as insurance consultant. Jerry continues to study to pass the series 65 Investment Advisor Representative Certification test.

Jerry and his wife Shirley have 2 daughters and six grandchildren. Jerry likes to golf, travel, and garden and has a web based business that sells pottery he purchases from Central America called www.potsamore.com.
